

What is claimed is:

1. A linear jewelry article of manufacture of a selected length to be worn in encircling relation about a user's neck as a necklace and about a user's wrist as a bracelet, said article comprising:
 - A. a string of a selected length delimiting a linear extent thereof;
 - B. plural beads with central openings therethrough characterized by
 - (1) a first select number thereof of non-magnetic construction material, and
 - (2) a remaining second select number thereof of magnetic construction material;
 - C. operative positions of said plural beads disposed along said string with a bead of said first and a bead of said second select numbers in a uniform repetitive ratio to each other;
 - D. cutting to a selected length said stringed beads according to a number of said uniform repetitive ratios of said first and second beads occurring therealong to obviate the tedium of counting;
 - E. selecting as a length for cutting a length appropriate for use as a necklace and a length appropriate for use as a bracelet; and
 - F. an operative position of a beaded string worn in helical turns on the person;whereby worn as a necklace and as a bracelet magnetic attraction of contacting magnetic beads maintain said helical turns without interconnection of the opposite ends of said article.
2. A linear jewelry article of manufacture as claimed in claim 1 wherein said ratio of non-magnetic to magnetic beads is 7 to 1.